

Message from Editor

We are delighted to present Vol. 17 No. 2 (July - December 2023) of the Journal of Sinology, marking a significant milestone in our journey towards establishing an international standard academic journal.

This Vol. 17 No. 2 (July - December 2023) issue of the Journal of Sinology is enriched with a special article titled, “A Brief Study Report on the Lancang-Mekong Cooperation: A Community of a Bright Shared Future”, and we are proud to feature eleven academic articles that delve into various facets of Chinese studies. These include: six articles explore into Linguistic Analyses and Pedagogy, these articles that delve into the intricacies of language, its acquisition, and teaching methodologies; four articles about Cultural and Media Analyses that explore cultural beliefs, media portrayals, and literary critiques, offering a window into societal perceptions and narratives; and one article on Educational Feasibility and Cooperation that focuses on the potential for educational collaboration and the feasibility of new academic programs.

Our unwavering mission is to disseminate high-quality research that serves the Chinese studies research community. We are deeply grateful to all authors who have chosen the Journal of Sinology as their platform to share their work. Our heartfelt appreciation extends to the scholars on our editorial board and our editorial office team for their dedication and meticulous efforts. The insightful reviews and feedback have been instrumental in enhancing the quality of our published articles.

We also wish to acknowledge the continuous support from the Sirindhorn Chinese Language and Culture Center and the School of Sinology at Mae Fah Luang University in our publishing endeavors.

Thank you for being a part of our journey, and we hope you find this issue both enlightening and engaging.